THE CALL's Endorsements For August 5 Primary

Editorial

THE CALL is offering the following endorsements of candidates and recommendations on ballot issues for the August 5, primary election.

We are not endorsing ANY candidates on the Republican, Libertarian or Constitution party ballots in the primary election. Democrats in some races have opposition and others have no opposition in either the primary election next week or the general election this fall. In addition, in some cases, there will be no recommendations on issues or candidates.

ISSUES

We are making recommendations on the following issues that include measures offered by the City of Kansas City, Mo., and the State of Missouri.

City Question A VOTE 'YES'

We are recommending a YES vote on City Question A.

Voters should be aware that Question A does not seek a tax increase. The question seeks voter approval for a transportation development district that will be called the, "Kansas City Urban Rail Transportation Development."

The ballot language, because of legal reasons, may be difficult for voters to understand because of the length.

However, to make a long story short, Question A seeks voter approval for streetcar expansion from downtown, where a starter line is currently under construction, to urban core areas – Linwood boulevard and Independence avenue. An additional proposal for the Linwood boulevard extension includes a link to a proposed Area Transportation Authority MAX bus line on Prospect.

If voters approve the transportation district, the question of tax increases come into play at a later election but the district must be approved first.

A group called Lin-Pro-Cor, under the leadership of Rev. Wallace S. Hartsfield II, has submitted a "letter of intent" to Mayor Sly James, who in turn, gave the group a signed letter of support, to create an economic district in the vicinity of the proposed Linwood line. We remind vot-

Can A Streetcar Be The Economic Engine Needed In The Urban Core?

By Eric L. Wesson Sr. CALL Staff Writer

On Tuesday, Aug. 5, voters will decide on one of the most debated questions on the ballot. That question will be whether the City can establish a Transportation Development District which will ultimately lead to the funding of additional streetcar routes including one route that travel east and west on Linwood from Main street to Prospect.

Question A will read in part: "Shall a transportation development district, to be known as the "Kansas City Urban Rail Transportation Development District" (the "District"), be organized in that part of Kansas City, Jackson County, Missouri generally bounded by the Missouri River on the north, State Line Road on the west, Interstate 435 on the east (but including an area east of Interstate 435 to incorporate Kauffman and Arrowhead Stadiums) and approximately 51 st Street on the southwest and Gregory Boulevard on the southeast (but the specific legal description below will control), for the purpose of developing the transportation project (the Project") operating with the approval at one or more future elections, approved as potential funding methods?"

A great deal of inaccurate information has been distributed concerning the tax over the past few months in an effort to defeat the TDD. Most recently Freedom, Inc., sent its voters a mailer which equated the TDD to Jim Crow stating that what it calls the "Tax Discrimination District" which discriminates against the African Americans and Latinos because it will raise the sales and property taxes in "our communities while areas outside of our neighborhoods will be EXCLUDED from these tax increase."

CALL To Host Candidates' Forum Saturday

THE CALL will host a candidates' and issues forum on Saturday Aug. 2, at the Gregg Klice Community center from 11 a.m. until 1:30 p.m.

THE CALL is excited to report that many of the candidates who are in close races have confirmed they will be in attendance at the forum as well as representatives who will discuss some of the issues they are supportive of or in opposition to.

THE CALL is asking that all candidates check in no later than 11 a.m., and all issues candidates report in no later than 12:15 p.m.

The candidates forum will be first with questions from teens from Generation Rap, and KPRS radio personality Dvan Devereaux.

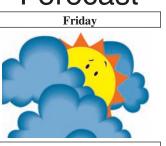

Audience questions must be short, concise and within the subject matter.

The issues forum will consist of all questions and answers surround the streetcar TDD both for and against.

Several Issues, Candidates And Constitutional Questions To Be Decided Tuesday, August 5

By Eric L. Wesson Sr. CALL Staff Writer

On Tuesday, Aug. 5, Kansas City and Jackson County voters will decide on several candidates for Congress, Missouri House of Representatives, the Jackson County legislature, Democratic and Republican committee seats and several Missouri Constitutional amendments as well as a fire and safety tax extension and a City issue concerning the creation of a tax district.

bama Lawsuit Moves Forward

WASHINGTON (AP) — A sharply divided House approved a Republican plan Wednesday to launch a campaignseason lawsuit against President Barack Obama, accusing him of exceeding the bounds of his constitutional authority. Obama and other Democrats derided the effort as a stunt aimed at tossing political red meat to conservative voters. Just a day before lawmakers were to begin a five-week summer recess, debate over the proposed lawsuit underscored the harshly partisan tone that has dominated the current Congress almost from its start in January 2013.

The vote to sue Obama was 225 to 201. Five conservative Republicans voted with Democrats in opposing the lawsuit. No Democrats voted for it.

Republicans said the legal action, focusing on Obama's implementation of his prized health care overhaul, was designed to prevent a further presidential power grab and his deciding unilaterally how to enforce laws.

STREAMLINE STREETCAR

"Are you willing to let any president choose what laws to execute and what laws to change?" asked House Speaker

John Boehner of Ohio. The Republicans also scoffed at Democratic claims that the lawsuit would be a waste of taxpayers' money.

"What price do you place on the continuation of our system of checks and balances? What price do you put on the Constitution of the United States?" said Rep. Candice Miller of Michigan. "My answer to each is 'priceless."

Something New: The Hem Shop's Emergency Service Alterations

By Eric L. Wesson Sr. CALL Staff Writer

Have you ever had to attend an event and the perfect suit or dress that you wanted to wear just didn't fit and every tailor shop in town is telling you the earliest you can get your clothes back is in two weeks?

Evan Cooper, owner of the Hem Shop, located on the corner of 77th and Prospect, saw the need for "emergency service alterations".

"Emergency service alterations is same day or next day service or three-day service," Cooper, who has been in business over the past three years, but has 20 years of alteration experience,

"I kind of got away from doing everything which is how I first started out. But, I saw a need for people to get simple things like hems and waists and sleeve jobs and other tailors would take two or three weeks to do. This is sort of a re-branding of my business and an effort to provide a service that is not being rendered," Coo-

"Same day, next day and three day service is an emergency. For those that are not in an emergency service it is the normal turnaround time. There is a different price for most of the same day service. I did change some service such as I don't do zippers anymore because it is so time consuming. I have to drive all over town looking for a zipper. But, I found that focusing on emergency services such as hems for people who have a funeral to attend or prom dress. Specialized fast service is what I am focused on," Cooper stated.

"Other tailor shops can't get everyone or everything completed in such a short time frame because they are doing all sorts of other things such as momgraming, redesigning and adding belt buckles. I started doing this because a man came in and said that he could not get a pair of pants hemmed at local clothing. It was alaming to me because he should have been able to get a pair of pants hemmed. They are just so backed up that they simply don't care. They feel like anyone could come in and say they have to attend a funeral and really not have to attend one.

EVAN COOPER THE HEM SHOP

"I like to also know that I relieved them of one less burden of having to worry about how they look. People are very appreciative that I was able to help them. I like doing the emergency services because they are fun and easy and i am helping people," he said.

Prices for services range from $12 to $18 for most items.

Dresses and gowns vary as does many suit coat alterations.

Hours of service are Tuesday - Friday 12 util 5:30 and Saturday Noon until 4:30.

Cooper has been known to open for special emergency service after hours.

Health Department WIC Program Closing One Clinic Location

City, Mo., Health department, in partnership with Missouri's Special Supplemental Program Nutrition for Women, Infants and Children, commonly known as WIC, announces changes in services available through the Health department's WIC program. Due to decreased clinic traffic and the need for increased classroom space, the department's Hickman Mills WIC Clinic located at the Freda Markley Early Childhood center, 9201 Bannister road, closed effective July 29.

"After reviewing the services now available

The City of Kansas nearby in the community and the increasing traffic at our other two locations, we feel that the most effective and efficient use of program funds is to focus our activities on those locations," said Dr. Christine Riederer, manager of the Maternal, Child and Community Health Education and Health Communication division. "We appreciate the partnership we have had with the early childhood center and the Hickman Mills community, and we more effectively reach those in need of WIC services."

He works for the Full Employment Council, a non-profit that helps those who are unemployed and under employed. The Full Employment Council, along with the city of Kansas City, recently received a $1 million grant from DOL to fund Face Forward KC an initiative to provide educational services, job training and placement services, mentoring services, and legal assistance to juvenile offenders and at-risk youth. She has been the President of the Town Fork Creek Neighborhood Association for 11 years and said she has learned so much in this role. She said that she wanted you to know that people in her community were working hard to improve their neighborhood and positively impact the lives of those around them.

President Obama connected immediately with the crowd.

"I just love the Midwest," President Obama said.

"I'm here because Victor is the sort of person I'm working for every single day -- somebody who never quits, somebody who is doing everything right, somebody who believes in the American Dream. Somebody who just wants a chance to build a decent life for himself and his family. And that's the vast majority of Americans. That's who I'm fighting for right here in Kansas City and all across this country. That's why I ran for President in the first place, to fight for folks like that," President Obama said.

"Now, we all know it hasn't always been easy. The crisis that hit near the end of my campaign back in 2008, it would end up costing millions of Americans their jobs, their homes, their sense of security. But we have fought back. We have got back off our feet, we have dusted ourselves off. Today, our businesses have added nearly 10 million new jobs over the past 52 months. Construction is up. Manufacturing is back. Our energy, our technology, our auto industries, they're all booming," he said.

"The unemployment rate is at its lowest point since September of 2008. It's dropped faster than any time in 30 years. This morning, we found out that in the second quarter of this year our economy grew at a strong pace, and businesses are investing, workers are building new homes, consumers are spending, America is exporting goods around the world. So the decisions that we made - to rescue our economy, to rescue the auto industry, to rebuild the economy on a new foundation, to invest in research and infrastructure, education -- all those things are starting to pay off," President Obam stated.

President Obam stated.

He also said, "The world's number-one oil and gas producer – that's not Saudi Arabia; that's not Russia – it's the United States of America. We've tripled the amount of electricity we get from wind. We've increased by 10 times the amount of electricity we get from the sun. And all that is creating tens of thousands of jobs across the country."

"Our high school graduation rate is at a record high. More young people are earning their college degrees than ever before. 401(k)s have recovered their value. Home prices are rising. And, yes, millions of families now have the peace of mind, just like Victor's family does, of getting quality, affordable health care when you need it. It makes a difference in people's lives," the President stated.

Sometimes you wouldn't know it if you were watching the news, but there are a lot of good reasons to be optimistic about America. We hold the best cards. Things are getting better. The decisions we make now can make things even better than that. In fact, the decisions we make now will determine whether the economic gains that we're generating are broad based, whether they just go to a few at the top or whether we got an economy in which the middle class is growing and folks who are trying to get into the middle class have more rungs on the ladder; whether ordinary folks are benefiting from growth," President Obama said.

"And that's what's at stake right now – making sure our economy works for every American. See, I'm glad that GDP is growing, and I'm glad that corporate profits are high, and I'm glad that the stock market is booming. But what really I want to see is a guy working nine to five, and then working some overtime, I want that guy making more than the minimum wage," he said.

"And what I really want is somebody who has worked for 20, 30 years being able to retire with some dignity and some respect. What I really want is a family that they have the capacity to save so that when their child is ready to go to college, they know they can help and that it's affordable, and that that child is not going to be burdened down with debt. That's the measure of whether the economy is working; not iust how well it's doing overall. but is it doing well for ordinary folks who are working hard every single day and aren't always getting a fair shot. That's what we're fighting for. That's why I ran for President. That's what I'm focused on every day," the President.

"And that's what sometimes Washington forgets. Your lives and what you're going through day to day - the struggles, but also the opportunities and the hopes and the good things, but sometimes the rough things that happen -- that's more important than some of the phony scandals or the fleeting stories that you see. This is the challenge of our time -- how do we make sure we've got an economy that is working for everybody? Now, all of you are doing your part to help bring America back. You're doing your job. Imagine how much further along we'd be, how much stronger our economy would be, if Congress was doing its job, too," he said.

"Congress had the chance to pass a law that would help lower interest rates on student loans. They didn't pass it. I acted on my own to give millions of Americans a chance to cap their payments, the program that Victor has taken advantage of. I don't want our young people just saddled with debt before they've even gotten started in life," the President said.

"So some of the things we're doing without Congress are making a difference, but we could do so much more if Congress would just come on and help out a little bit. Just come on. Come on and help out a little bit. Stop being mad all the time. Stop just hating all the time. Come on. Let's get some They work done together. did pass this workforce training act, and it was bipartisan. There were Republicans and Democrats, and everybody was all pleased. They came, we had a bill signing, and they were all in their suits. I said, doesn't this feel good? We're doing something. It's like, useful. Nobody is shouting at each other. It was really nice. I said, let's do this again. Let's do it more often," he laughed.

"I know they're not that happy that I'm President, but that's okay. Come on. I've only got a couple of years left. Come on, let's get some work done. Then you can be mad at the next President," he said.

Mayor Sly James, Gov. Jay Nixon, Rep Emanuel Cleaver and rep. Lacy Clay were also in attendance with the President. Rep. Cleaver flew back to Washington with the President on Air Force One.

Streetcar

Some community leaders and CALL readers who received the mailer are calling it, "race baiting".

"There is nothing wrong with opposing anything or having an opposing viewpoint. However, I draw the line when it comes to race baiting a situation just to inflame the passions of the people. That was just wrong."

"As an intelligent voter they could have reached me on a different level," THE CALL reader said.

Freedom alleges that the tax "targets" the "poorest neighborhoods in the city for the largest tax increase in the city's history."

The fact of the matter is that only about 10 percent of the tax will be paid residents. More than 90 percent (basically 95 percent) of the local funding comes from the Plaza, downtown and stadiums - that's both sales tax and the special assessments within 1/3 mile of the lines.

One Freedom officer explained it as residents who don't live within the streetcar line are still paying the tax when they purchase food items at their neighborhood store and the tax does not benefit them directly.

However, it should be up to the neighborhoods to put together development plans for their neighborhoods to present to their Council person just as Ivanhoe and Key Coalition are in the process of doing for the Linwood line.

So should the mind set be, that if we don't get an economic development plan then no one should get one? How many neighborhoods benefit directly from the one cent county sales tax that funded the renovations from the stadium projects?

In addition Freedom points to the increase in sales tax at the grocery stores and how it would put a strain on small businesses such as Leon's Thriftway and the Metro Thriftway because customers would be forced to go to Brookside, where many go anyway, to purchase groceries. Suppose a person buys $50 worth of groceries in the proposed TDD. That equates to an additional 50 cents in sales tax. About how much would a person burn in gas to drive out to Brookside, which has its own one cent sales tax which it controls as a CID, to avoid paying an additional 50 cents?

The huge bulk of the special assessment revenue comes from the Main Street line which only has two black owned businesses and has a sparse black population. These areas consists of blacks, whites, Hispanics, Asians. Those who live in Johnson County who come into the city to watch the Royals and Chiefs play will also pay a sales tax purchases made at the stadiums.

No tax will be collected from anyone until the government's matching funds are established and put into place. If no government money is allotted for the project then no tax will be collected.

A Resolution has been introduced that will lock in a personal property tax rate so that homeowners will not lose their homes as property value increase. It is estimated that the tax increase will be about $47 per year.

The entire streetcar project will begin all at the same time so that a situation does not occur where one line gets more attention than another one.

exempt from sales tax throughout the state of Missouri. However, over-the-counter medica-

Also, some concern has arisen over a quote from Rep. Emanuel Cleaver II, when he was mayor, concerning light rail when the then Mayor was battling with Clay Chastain over the light rail issue. His comments had nothing to do with this streetcar plan, but rather the light rail plan that had been presented at that time.

Question A could be confusing to some in that it contains several additional parts that the voter does not have to vote on, but explains what the TDD consists of and what the boundaries if the tax district will be, if the vote is passed, and a summary of the project will be. It is a long Question because of the additional information.

The community is definitely divided on this issue mainly because of the misinformation that has been circulating by opposition groups.

Several weeks ago a select group of individuals began meeting with Dr. Wallace S. Hartsfield II, to discuss an economic development plan to leverage the black vote to benefit the community. The church Dr. Hartsfield pastors is located along the streetcar route.

Dr. Hartsfield knew that a streetcar alone would not spur economic development so he gathered with various individuals, clergy, business owners, residents and neighborhood association leaders to outline a plan that could be implemented so that the community would be in a position to benefit if the tax is passed.

The group, which calls itself the Linwood Prospect Corridor (Lin-Pro-Cor), identified an area of concern which is called the "Special Impact District" which consists of an area between 22nd street on the north to 39th street on the south end. And between Paseo on the west and Indiana on the east.

Several weeks later the group submitted a letter of intent to Mayor James requesting his support of projects in the outlined District in the same manner as other Districts such as the Power and Light District and the Crossroads District that have been supported by the City.

"For the most part, we support the economic development possibilities that could arise from this project. However, as you are well aware the black community has been made countless promises when it comes to development when elected officials seek our votes. These empty promises have resulted in a distrust throughout the black community," the group said.

"We are well aware that these promises have not taken place during your administration but what happens or does not happen from this point forward will be a reflection of vour leadership contribution to continuation or transformation of this tragic east side saga. At present, we have a 'gentlemen's agreement.' Our handshake, however, will not be enforceable after you leave office in, maybe, five years when construction will just be beginning on the east side. Therefore, we find it imperative that we have this document signed by you as an agreement and a commitment from the City that after the election, if the Tax District is passed, that we continue this process and create what we have deemed a 'Special Impact District," the group stated.

"We also request in this commitment that every development tool, and we can't stress this enough, be employed to make projects in the "Special Impact District" interesting for developers to want to participate in this great development.

"These incentives should not be limited to, but include and Tax Increment Finance, PIAC, Historical Tax Credits and other means of financial support as other 'Districts' have received in the past and present," they said.

The group also requested all of the technical support that is necessary to make the "Special Impact District" successful such as an urban planner dedicated to the project. As well as other technical experts dedicated to the "Special Impact District".

"A streetcar alone would not be enough to create economic development. In the cities where streetcars have helped to spur economic development there was already some infrastructure in place," Dr. Hartsfield said.

"We know that this is not the end of what needs to be done, but it is a start. And we realize that the additional taxes are real and we understand that, but this is something will help the area," he said.

On Friday, July 25, Mayor James responded to the letter of intent.

"Many of the issues you raised are addressed in the Council's Resolution," Mayor James said.

"In regards to your letter specifically, first please understand that I alone cannot bind the City by simply signing an agreement. That would take an Ordinance of the Council authorizing me or the manager to sign such an agreement. What I can do unilaterally is give my word in writing that over the next year to five years while I am in office, I will commit my support for the creation of the District you describe as Lin-ProCor Special Impact District. Similarly, I would encourage other areas of our City that have seen historical dis-investment to the follow your lead in organizing as a community," the mayor said.

"I support the use of any and all statutorily authorized programs and incentives (TIF. PIEA, Chapter 100, Chapter 353, LCRA) as applicable to projects that are in line with a strategic vision and targeted to gain the biggest bang for the buck. I will also advocate for the identification and use of tax credit and grant programs from state and local and private entities with the understanding that the City does not grant tax credits and can only advocate for the same," Mayor James said.

"We will ensure that the planner already dedicated to the Third District focuses on the 'Impact District'. We will employ the necessary incentives and RFPs to identify and recruit developers with subject matter expertise and financial capacity, both nationally and locally and well as focusing our lobbying efforts on the state and federal levels," he said.

"You have my personal commitment to those items solely in my control and my further commitment to advocate with the Council. I will partner with you and the community so that over time, we will transform LinProCor area into a more vibrant and prosperous areas," the Mayor said.

Dr. Hartsfield is joined by many area ministers and neighborhood leaders including, Key Coalition and Ivanhoe Neighborhood association.

Government Health Care Success:

By Jesse Jackson President And CEO Rainbow PUSH Coalition

This week marks the 49th anniversary of two of the most important "big government" programs ever — Medicare and Medicaid.

On July 30, 1965, President Lyndon B. Johnson signed these two critical health care programs into law. At the signing ceremony, LBJ handed the first two Medicare cards to former President Harry Truman, who had called for the program years before, and his wife, former first lady Bess Truman.

Contradicting the conservative fable that "big government" programs never work, Medicare has made the lives of millions of American senior citizens more secure and healthier. Medicaid has improved the lives of millions more poor Americans, by giving them access to health care at a fair price.

These programs are among the most important legislation passed during LBJ's Great Society, and are so popular that Republicans spend every election cycle pretending that they really support expanding coverage, while spending a lot of their legislative time in the House and Senate trying to whittle down both programs.

Today is no different. Conservatives on the Supreme Court have just ruled that a key provision of the Affordable Care Act is invalid, putting an important national law in jeopardy – on a technicality! This law was argued and debated over two long, arduous years. Everyone voiced their opinion, and still does. Lies were told about what "Obamacare" would supposedly do. Dire predictions of failure were made by conservative pundits – too few people would sign up; too few young people would sign up, it would kill millions of jobs.

None of that proved true. Poor and middle-class Americans have signed up for the Affordable Care Act at rates higher than expected, among them millions of the young. No death panels have emerged, despite the predictions of Sarah Palin and Michele Bachmann. And the economy has continued to grow, despite right-wing attempts to obstruct progress.

Yet far too many Republican governors and legislatures, especially across the South, continue to prevent the expansion of Medicaid to their own citizens. Medicaid expansion is a key part of the Affordable Care Act, an opportunity for millions of "near-poor" Americans to gain access to health

President Obama Lawsuit

However, Democrats said the lawsuit would go nowhere and was designed only to encourage conservatives to vote in this November's congressional elections. They also warned repeatedly that it could be a precursor of a more drastic GOP effort. Said Rep. Louise Slaughter, D-N.Y.: "The lawsuit is a drumbeat pushing members of the Republican Party to impeachment."

Congressional lawsuits against presidents are rare. In 2008, a federal judge backed a suit by Democrats who then controlled the House and were trying to force the Bush administration to honor House subpoenas of senior White House officials. Though the House won the first round in court, that decision was under appeal when a settlement was reached and the lawsuit was dropped.

On Wednesday, neither side wasted time in using the fight to mine campaign contributions and line up support for their candidates.

House Democrats emailed one fundraising solicitation as debate was underway and another moments after the vote, with one saying, "The GOP is chomping at the bit to impeach the president." And White House Senior Adviser Dan Pfeiffer emailed supporters, saying, "This is the least productive Congress in decades. And instead of doing their job, they are suing the president for doing his."

Centennial Homecoming For Phi Beta Sigma Fraternity

By Eric Wells Special to THE CALL

During the week of July 16-20, Phi Beta Sigma Fraternity Inc., celebrated their 100th Anniversary "Centennial Jubilee" in Washington, D.C.

Phi Beta Sigma Fraternity, Inc., was founded on the campus of Howard university on January 9, 1914 by three young scholars, Abram Langston Taylor, Leonard Francis Morse and Charles Ignatius Brown.

The Phi Beta Sigma motto is, "Culture for Service and Service for Humanity." The celebration was spectacular as a multitude of members had the opportunity to reflect on the century long services the fraternity is committed to performing. This was evident during the opening ceremony when Sigma member the Rev. Al Sharpton gave a moving speech that emphasized the need to continue our service efforts in communities.

"President Barack Obama shared 'My Brother's Keeper' initiative to build opportunities for boys and young men of color. Phi Beta Sigma is fully engaged in the President's goals by developing a strategy to align with this endeavor," a spokesman said.

Apart of the centennial celebration was the unveiling of the Sigma monument which took place on the campus of Howard university. This monument features a historical perspective of Phi Beta Sigma and their founders, and on the back of the monument is Sigma member names etched in stone.

LIFELONG FRIENDS RECONNECT IN KANSAS CITY . . . Meeting back home in Kansas City, Mo., the last weekend of July, a small, select group of seasoned gentlemen celebrated a significant milestone, 65 years of life. They affectionately call themselves the Kansas City Boys, although most have ventured away from the Midwest. Alumni from Central High School Class of 1967, they first re-grouped in Kansas City for their 40th birthdays. At age 55, they met in "What Happens Here -- Stays Here" Las Vegas. Lots of fun times remembered and many new memories created. Realizing that advancing years often challenge ones recall, a convenient spot was designed to house key moments in their history. Much has been collected for their opportune review at their website, www.thekcboys.com. The celebrants are Gary Kynard, a 41-year resident of Los Angeles, and president of his insurance consulting business, Endsure.com; Barron Delaney, 38 years between Northern and Southern California, as a financial service executive; lifelong Kansas City resident, Harold White, continuing enjoyment of his warehouse shipping and receiving manager position in the apparel industry; Lloyd Mathis, two years in Humble, Texas, and is a former long haul trucker; William (Willie) Luke, 38 years in Houston, Texas and is a Continental Airlines retiree after 33 years of service; Ed Fields of Fort Worth, Texas having retired from the Air Force and postal service; Louis Jones of Kansas City with the FAA; Errol Riggins, the young 64-yearold of the group, resides in Kansas City and is a Commerce Bank retiree; Lawrence A Jones Jr., for many years in the mortuary business in Kansas City; the late Charles Smith, retiree of Armco Steel. Mo-Kan Afrikan American Arts Festival To Feature Basket Weavers

The Mo-Kan Afrikan American Arts Festival will be held Saturday, Aug. 9, from 12 to 6 p.m., at Quindaro Park, 3301 Sewell Ave., in Kansas City,

Enjoy the unique artwork of local black artists and watch and listen as the South Carolina Basket Weavers turn grass into works of art and tell stories of the Gullah people.

Also, on Sunday, Aug. 10, visit the Bloch lobby of the Nelson Atkins Art Museum, 4525 Oak, from 1 to 4 p.m., to see Lynette Youson, Kimberly Youson, Mary Eaddy and the Gullah Basket Weavers of South Carolina.

Sweet grass basket weaving is an art form passed down from enslaved Africans in South Carolina who were abducted from Senegal, West Africa in the 1700s. Lynette Youson and her daughters, Kimberly and Mary, will chronicle the history of rice growing ancestors who maintained a piece of African culture for future generations. They will also demonstrate African basket weaving style.

The event is free to the public. For more information, contact Mary Martin, (913) 788-

National Epidemic Of 'Clergy Burnout' Pushes Alarming Number Of Faith Leaders To Leave The Ministry

By Barbara Blake The Citizen-Times

The faith leader who stands behind the pulpit in your house of worship each week may be silently weeping inside, filled with despair and overcome with the exhaustion that comes from unfailingly putting the needs of a congregation before his or her

It's not happening in every church, synagogue or mosque, of course, and many clergy members successfully balance their work and personal

But there is a naepidemic of "clergy burnout," with an alarming number of faith leaders leaving traditional ministries - or sticking with the job and living unhappily and unhealthily.

It's a job description not for the faint of heart, and the work schedule is brutal: 24 hours a day, seven days a week. In addition to often being a spouse and parent, a clergy member is often simultaneously a writer and orator (sermons). Biblical scholar, chaplain to the sick or dving, teacher, executive director, CEO, human manager. resource therapist, liaison to other community organizations and point person answerable to church hierarchy and the governing bodies of their denominations.

today, pastors aren't taught half that stuff," said the Rev. Bill Buchanan, who left his pastorate at Grace Covenant Presbyterian Church to start the Asheville Youth Mission with his late wife and fellow tor, Aimee Wallis Buchanan.

"In most seminaries

"We are taught how to interpret the Bible, we are taught theology, how to preach and teach, but ministry and the church is changing so fast it is hard to keep up," Buchanan said. "All of these expectations are legitimate, but it is virtually impossible for one pastor to do all of those things well at once."

The Rev. Allen

Ezekiel 11:12 And ye shall know that I AM the LORD. (From the Holy Bible, King James Version)

Proctor, a retired Presbyterian minister now living in Asheville, agreed that leadership and management skills are most often learned on the job and from experienced mentors if the pastor is fortunate enough to have one.

"Seminary prepares pastors to be preachers and teachers and pastoral counselors: it does not prepare them to be leaders of a congregation," Proctor said. "Saying seminaries prepare pastors (to lead) is like saying cooking school prepares you to operate a restaurant.'

The fallout from those myriad expectations is seen in a study by the Schaeffer Institute of Church Leadership Development showing 70 percent of pastors were so stressed they regularly considered leaving the ministry; 35 to 40 percent of pastors actually left, most after only five years. Another research project in 2005 and 2006 showed that of 1,050 pastors surveyed, 100 percent had a close associate or fellow seminarian who left the ministry because of burnout or conflict within the church.

That survey also showed that 89 percent had considered leaving; 57 percent said they would leave if they had a better option to make a living; and 71 percent said they battled depression.

Local faith leaders

- all of whom said pastoral ministry can be a joyful and fulfilling career -- said a kev issue leading to problems is a pastor's failure or inability to set boundaries responsibilities. Many succumb to a mindset that they are failing as church leader if they are not everything to everyone all the time.

Other issues are an absence of enriching activities relationships and outside the church; the quandary of being the nurturer but rarely the nurtured; strains and on marriage family as the pastor spends long and unpredictable hours tending to churchfamily needs; and an absence of general self-care needed for physical, mental and spiritual health.

Some of those problems can be addressed by pastors being more open with church leadership about their struggles and needs, but that's not always an easy conversation.

"Pastors do give a lot, and that's their job, to care for the congregation -- there's no ambiguity about that," said the Rev. Steve Runholt, leader -- happily, he said -- of Warren Wilson Presbyterian Church.

"But it's also true that pastors are human beings, and they need some support ... but it's an awkward thing because you don't want your congregation to feel they have to take care of you - that gets the roles backward," Runholt said.

"That being said, I think it's important for congregations to find ways to support or recognize their pastor, to let them know they are appreciated and not taken for granted," he said. "A bit like marriage, where you find ways to show your partner vou respect. love and appreciate them. It should also be said that some congregations are very good at this." Self-Care

Is Critical

The Rev. Buddy Corbin was loved and respected during his 32 years of pastoral ministry, the last 16 at Calvary Baptist away from church Asheville, before he retired in 2007 to become a hospice and hospital chaplain. "I knew I needed to step away about 18 months prior to making this decision at age 59; my wife began to see signs of fatigue, joylessness, cynicism and small resentments beginning to build," Corbin said. "It was not the fault of the church or any of the members: it was entirely mine.'

Corbin said he never set reasonable boundaries and "internalized the demands of the many tasks required of a minister: 'successful' recruit members, raise more income. counseling, management, fulfilling the mission of the church while keeping the members unified and as 'happy' possible.

"There were those early morning surgeries, long hours in waiting areas consoling family members; the nursing facilities and faithful folks, unable to come to church anymore, who need visits: the church and community meetings that require and expect pastoral presence and consultation," he said. "And let's not forget that there's a sermon to be written." Corbin said some pastors have learned to take a day off and perilously endure the critics for not responding to an emergent call for support from a church member."

"I was not able to do this; my codependent nature and desire to please kept my phone nearby and the wheels of my car always hot," he said. "I burned out because I forgot my own need for selfcare.

In hindsight, Corbin said, he could have asked for sabbati cals but didn't. "I had arrived at a belief that I was essential to the health and well-being of the church: my role and image had fused. "The only way to get my energy back was to learn to refuse and defuse," he said. "I was not successfully able to do this, so with the blessing and support of my wife, I excused myself from the pastoral ministry.'

Corbin said a former seminary professor once reminded the class that "There is only one Jesus, and vou're not him."

"The pastoral ministry is a fulfilling life and it must be tempered with selfcare," Corbin said. "How does a pastor care for him/herself? Steer clear of the illusion that you have no emotional or spiritual limits." Inside The

Pastorate

Atrueunderstanding of that need for selfcare and reasonable limits is missing in some seminaries, Runholt said, adding that he'd like to teach a seminary course in the realities of pastoral ministry. "Church is that place where people's hopes. dreams, expectations, frustrations, anger, trauma and disappointments come together at the same time, and they're often all focused on you," he said. "I would ask my students, are vou ready for that? Because if you're not, you're ready for something else.'

Church members may say they want pastors to take care of themselves, but they often don't understand why down time is needed because they don't see the myriad tasks the pastor navigates beyond the Sunday service. "Alot of what pastors

do Monday through Saturday is invisible to the congregation, so they wonder, well, why do you need all this time off? Why do vou need four weeks of vacation, and I only get two at my job?" Runholt said. The Rev. Mahan

Siler, a retired Baptist minister who now counsels and mentors other pastors, said he often asks churchgoers how long they think it takes for a pastor to prepare for Sunday worship, including the sermon, and most will guess three to four hours.

"The ones I know who take it seriously give it 12 to 14 hours, and that's already a third of your work week -- although no pastor works just 40 hours," he said. "So much of a pastor's work is private and confidential, so you can't talk about what you're doing," he said. "I'll sometimes ask them how many emails they have to respond to in a day, and it's often 80 or 90. But no one sees that." Another unseen side effect of pastoral ministry is the impact on families, Siler said.

"How do you sustain a healthy marriage and healthy parenting and still do this work. because the work is unlimited," he said. "Often the heroes and the ones who are wounded are the spouses ... often their husbands or wives give their best stuff to other people, and they come home exhausted emotionally.'

Buchanan said some pastors spend so much time working with and for their congregations that they have little downtime outside the church community.

'This often means that what social time a pastor does have ends up being spent at parties or gatherings with church members, because that is the community know," Buchanan said. "Church folks are great people, but when you walk into that dinner party, you're still 'the pastor.' You can never really leave that role at the door.'

munity -- a critical component to overall well-being.

The Rev. Sara Ator Wilcox, who with the Rev. Amanda Hendler-Voss co-pastors Land of the Sky United Church of Christ, said the two utilize a simple tool of blocking off a 24-hour "Sabbath for Co-Pastors" from 5 p.m. Friday to 5 p.m. Saturday each week. They are available in a crisis, of course, but try not to work during those hours.

"There is a whole lot to why clergy burn out, but I think that clergy by and large do not say 'no' well, so they fail to establish and maintain the boundaries they need for self-care and health," Wilcox said.

Rabbi Batsheva Meiri, leader of Congregation Beth Tephila, has clearly established those boundaries for herself.

"I have made a huge and intentional commitment to having self-care be part of my work; keeping myself grounded is part of being able to take care of and execute my duties to the congregation," she said. "I think I re-

Meiri strives to stick to a "12-hour rule," meaning if she knows she will still be working at 10 p.m., her schedule will show she won't be in the office until 10 a.m. the following morning, "so I don't get caught in a trap of working 15-hour days."

Being part of her congregation is "a big part of my life, but it's not the only action going on in my life," Meiri said, noting she is heavily involved in the tai kwon do community, with which she has practiced for six years.

Meiri is proactive seizing about opportunities professional development, "which crosses over to personal development, and I come back with a lot to give to my own congregation."

"It's finding tricks like that about how to fill up the well so there are always reserves, because the truth of the matter is you can run dry, and problems begin when clergy people try to give from an empty reservoir," ally do that piece of clergy friends who it well, and I don't worry about becoming burned out."

Meiri said she also follows the example of her father, a rabbi now years who "found purpose and meaning in his life outside of the able to enjoy a great deal of fulfillment and happiness (in retirement) because there were other things that nourished him."

Support

Is Crucial Proctor said it's essential for pastors to develop inner and interpersonal resources that "give them an identity and a mission independent of their role as pastor."

"Personal spiritual practices, recreational pursuits, diet and exercise programs and an intimate circle of peers and friends all serve to keep pastors grounded and Proctor energized," said.

"Pastors having friends outside the church community is crucial," said, "and pastors also need understand their stresses and the life they lead."

Having that peer support can be invaluable, said Siler, who retired for almost 15 has convened many group gatherings over the years where pastors can "be out of the rabbinate and has been role with a few others who know the role," including one with Episcopal priests that has met monthly for 10 years.

Siler believes there are two kinds of pastors. "Those who think they can do it solo, who feel like they don't really need anybody else, who feel it's up to them to do all the work ... those are the ones I see get isolated and often burn out - or act out. They're vulnerable when they get isolated, as any of us would

The other kind, he said, are "those who say I can't do this work by myself; I need a supportive community, even if it's two or three people, or a coach I call twice a month and talk about my work, or Buchanan a therapist."

Niles Home To Host First Annual 5K Run/Walk Sept. 6

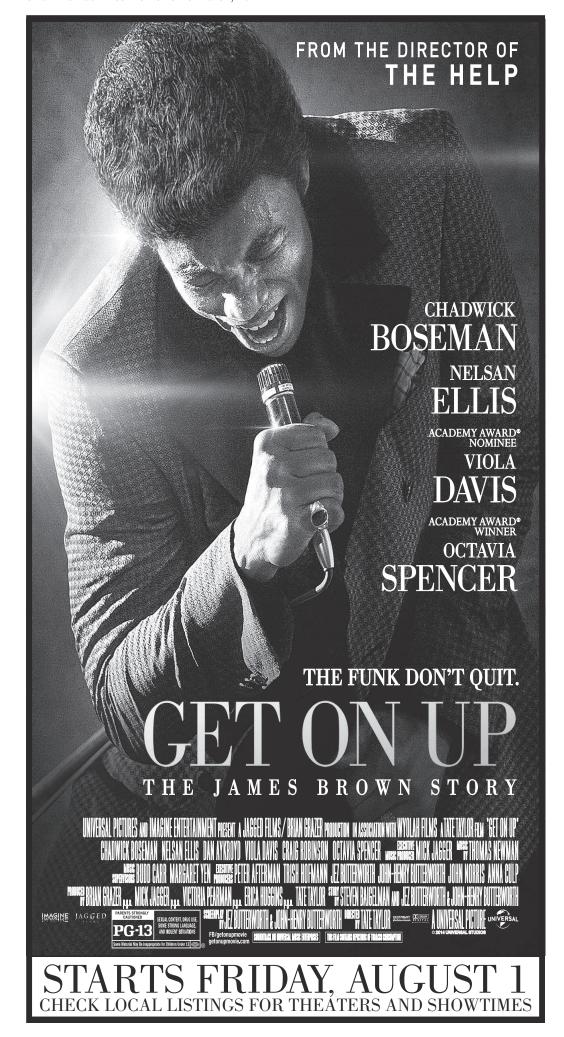

Niles Home for Children (Niles Home) will host its First Annual Niles 5K Run/Walk at 9:00 A.M. on Saturday, Sept. 6.

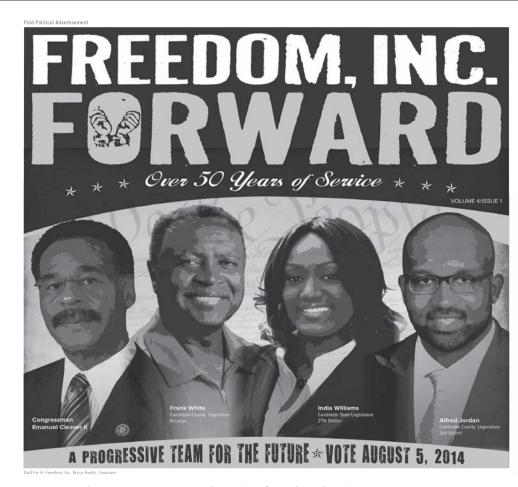

Proceeds from the 5K will benefit Niles Home, serving the community's high-risk children and their families and restoring hope for traumatized and abused children. In addition, the Niles 5K will attract new visitors to the Wendell Phillips Neighborhood and 18th and Vine area.

Supported in part by the Neighborhood Tourist Development Fund, the Niles 5K will begin and finish at Niles Home for Children, 1911 E.

23rd street. Medals will be awarded to top finishers in each age group and pre- and post-race snacks will be provided.

Sponsorship opportunities are available for the Niles 5K to help Niles Home provide mental health and educational services to underserved Kansas City children. Sponsorship pledges can be made by contacting Latrina Collins at Niles5K@nileshomekc.org or (816) 241-3448. Registration for the Niles 5K is $25 and can be completed by visiting www.nileshomekc.org.

ers that more often than not, urban core residents are forced to go outside of their communities and neighborhoods for goods and services. That favor is not returned.

Much of the proposed Linwood line runs through the 3rd Councilmanic District, an area of the city that needs to be energized with "outside the box' thinking, new ideas, innovation and creativity for sustainability.

VOTE 'YES' ON QUESTION A

CITY QUESTION 1

City Question 1 seeks voter approval to renew the existing ¼ cent sales tax for the Kansas City, Mo., Fire department. It is not a new tax. Funds will be used for equipment and training. We are recommending a "YES" vote.

STATE OF MISSOURI CONSTITUTIONAL AMENDMENTS

The state of Missouri is offering five Constitutional amendments on the August 5, ballot.

Constitutional Amendment No. 7 Vote "YES"

The measure seeks an amendment to enact a \(^3\)4 cent temporary sales tax (10 years) that is expected to generate $480 million annually or $4.8 billion over the duration of the tax. The revenue can only be used for transportation purposes – repairs to state and local highways, roads, bridges, etc.

Several Kansas City area projects have been identified including some funds for streetcar expansion and the Prospect avenue MAX bus line in addition to work on area highways, roads and bridges. Any increase in the gas tax is prohibited, according to language in the amendment and funds can only be used for transportation purposes. A "yes" vote will be beneficial to Kansas City.

THE CANDIDATES

Voter's Choice

We are endorsing the following candidates in the August 5, primary election

U.S. Representative, 5th District (Democrat) Emanuel Cleaver II

State Representative

District 22 – BRANDON ELLINGTON, Democrat District 23 – Randy D. Dunn, Democrat (no opposition) District 26 – Gail McCann Beatty, Democrat (no opposition) District 27 – BONNAYE V. MIMS, Democrat

County Executive – Jackson County (Democrat) Mike Sanders County Legislature, 1st District At-Large (Democrat)

There are two good men running for this seat -- Sherwood Smith, a leader in the Firefighters Union and Democratic party stalwart for many years and Frank White, former All Star member and champion of the Kansas City Royals and a hometown hero.

Smith has worked for years, mostly behind the scenes, in the Democratic party and has raised funds for many of the party's candidates. He is well versed on the issues. White is extremely popular and could win this race on name recognition alone but is a novice to politics and the process.

The winner in this race will have a Republican challenger in the fall. We will not be making a recommendation in this race.

VOTER'S CHOICE

County Legislature, 2nd District (Democrat)

The winner will replace Bishop James Tindall on the legislature. There is no Republican challenger in the fall election.

Democratic candidates are Zachery L. Berkstresser, Alfred B. Jordan and Sterling L. Brown.

Bishop Tindall, during his stints on the legislature, was able to build coalitions and was a champion for minority interests in Jackson County. It will be a challenge for any first term legislator to be as effective as Tindall.

In 2010 Turk received 3,435 votes in the Freedom wards during that year's Primary.

In the General election he received 5,070 votes. A difference of 1.535 votes.

Also in the November 2010. Primary 7,337 Democratic ballots were pulled compared to 1,176 Republican ballots in the Freedom wards.

But, in the November 2012 General election Democrats pulled 11,034 ballots and Republicans pulled 1,720 ballots in the Freedom wards.

Voter turnout for the August 5, election is expected to be between six and eight percent.

Voters will be asked whether they want a Democratic, Republican, Libertarian or Constitutional ballot.

Democrat

On the Democratic ballot voters will decide the following seats:

5th Congressional District

Incumbent Rep. Emanuel Cleaver II, faces four challengers for his 5th District Congressional seat. The challengers are Mark S. Memoly, Bob Gough, Eric Holmes and Charles Lind-

Gough has run for the 6th Congressional District as a Republican. Memoly has also run as a Republican in the past.

Richard W. McKie is running unopposed for the 3rd District. Issues

One of the most discussed issues that voters will decide on the August 5, ballot is a Transportation Development District, which if passed, will give voters an opportunity to determine the amount of tax they will pay during the November 4 election.

The ultimate goal is to create and pay for, with additional federal funding, a street car line that will travel along Independence avenue.

Another line will travel down main street and a connecting line will travel from Linwood and Main to Linwood and Prospect.

The August 5, vote is only to determine if voters want a TDD. It has nothing to do with an actual tax.

The voters that will be voting on this particular issue must reside within Jackson county, Missouri from Missouri River on the north, State Line Road on the west, Interstate 435 on the east (but including an area east of Interstate 435 to incorporate Kauffman and Arrowhead stadiums) and approximately 51st street on the southwest and Gregory Boulevard on the

In 22 states, many of them among our nation's poorest states, Republican governors and state legislatures are refusing to expand Medicaid. Almost half of those refusals come from the states that made up the old Confederacy (10 out of 11, with only Arkansas, headed by a Democratic governor, attempting to find an alternative solution to expansion). Wisconsin and Maine and Alaska, along with another nine states across the Midwest and in the Upper Rockies, are also refusing to expand Medicaid - almost all of them headed by Republican governors. This is just wrong. Their constituents need access to health care, too.

I call on the GOP to keep hope alive for all their constituents, even their less affluent constituents, and their minority constituents. I call on them to stop blocking access to Medicaid. It's time to do the right thing, and end their partisan obstruction.

It's The PRIMARY Election. We Must VOTE.

By Senator David Haley Democrat, 4th District, Kansas

Newspaper readers are more prone than others to vote EACH time, EVERY time an Election and the resulting opportunity to be heard (and there is represented) presents itself.

That's a good thing! Thank you. But, since this Primary Election is SO crucial, I wanted to ask Kansas readers to bring a family member or neighbor or friend to the polls with you,too.

Many election related standards are gauged by the strengths/weaknesses exhibited in THIS Primary election turn-out. Why ONLY vote for U.S. President every FOUR years?!

Advance voting (by mail or at the Elections Office-8th/State or the Satellite Office-!-435/K10) has BEGUN. It is estimated that onethird ballots will be cast in Advance. Is yours?

SENATOR DAVID HALEY

Below is a brief primer, which is presented neutrally and without endorsement of any candidate or even political party by me, that I would personally appreciate your, the READER, sharing with our only occasionally voting family member or neighbor or friend. Please?

What is a Primary Election?

Tuesday

August 5

The Primary election is THIS Tuesday, Aug. 5. This election is held for the Democratic Party and the Republican Party. It is the opportunity for members of each party to choose their candidates who will advance to the General Election,

As a Party election, the political parties set the rules for who is eligible to vote their Party ballot.

Voters affiliated with the Democratic Party vote a Democratic Party ballot.

Voters affiliated with the Republican Party vote a Republican Party ballot. Voters who are not affiliated with either Party must affiliate to be eligible to vote a Party ballot. Voters who are affiliated with the Libertarian Party are not eligible to vote in either Party election. Libertarian Party candidates have been selected by caucus. Libertarian Party voters may be eligible to vote in a non-partisan special election, such as the sales tax election in the City of Edwardsville.

Why should I vote?

Besides all of the OBVIOUS reasons, you should know there are some very interesting races on both Party ballots

The Democratic Party ballot has:

•Two nominees for United States Senator. The contenders are Chad Taylor and Patrick Wiesner.

•Two nominees for United States Representative. The contenders are Kelly Kultala and Reginald (Reggie) Marselus.

•Three nominees for District Court Judge, Division 11. The three candidates are Timothy L. Dupree, Courtney Mikesic, and James T. Yoakum. Many precincts will also be electing precinct committeemen and precinct committeewomen. The Primary is the only opportunity for party voters to elect their party precinct com-

Wyandotte County Offers New Voting Options

Wyandotte County voters now have more ways to vote than ever before.

Wyandotte County Elections Commissioner Bruce Newby is this week opening a new satellite location for advance voting at Kansas Speedway. The advance voting site is located at 110th Street and I-70 (Exit 410) just south of the Kansas Speedway. The new location makes voting available to registered voters on both Saturdays before Election Day and the entire week prior to Election Day.

"Because of the ease of access to this location, we also hope to serve many county voters who can combine a shopping trip to the Legends or attendance at a sports event with voting. We also hope this new voting venue will help to increase overall voter turnout," said Elections Commissioner Bruce Newby.

"As we gain experience and success with this initiative, we hope to expand voting opportunities in other parts of our county if we can find suitable facilities and adequate funding," Newby said.

Henry M. Louis Center Hosts International Visitors

Kansas City, Kas., Community college's Henry M. Louis Center for Global Transitional Justice, along with Gene and Karen Hernandez, recently hosted three international visitors sponsored by the State department.

This is the first time that the Henry M. Louis center has teamed up with the Hernandez family, which hosts this event regularly. During the hospitality visit, Dr. Ewa Unoke, Director of the Henry M. Louis Center, moderated a friendly discussion to share information on the visitors'

Jean Carlo Huaroc Portocarrero from Peru, a social justice advocate and lawyer, discussed the issues of democracy and transitional justice in Peru. After two decades of armed conflict in the country, it is beginning to consolidate its democratic experiment. After revisiting its past, Peru established a truth commission, national reparations plan and the trial of the former president, Alberto Fujimori. The most critical issue now concerns the slow implementation of the reparation plans to victims, such as health care, education and monetary compensation of the

Melanie Chiponda from Zimbabwe, has led several peace protests to demand the rights of rural women under the Constitution of Zimbabwe. She mobilized her fellow women activists to seek compensation when the Robert Mugabeled government evicted the rural women from their land. When the government continued to arrest rural people for poaching on fish in the riverine area, Melanie organized the rural women to register and to obtain fishing permits for the rural people. Through her campaigns, the government has built new homes and relocated

LeRoy Green

Sr., (John Edward Seevers) died on July 22nd, 2014.

He was born on March 5, 1932, in Saginaw, Mich.

His birth parents were Paul Edward Browning and Beatrice Seevers. His parents were Ben and Rosa Green.

He was married to Florence (Graham) for 44 years, until her death on December 8, 1993. There were seven children born from this union, Michael E. Green (Linda Sue), LeRoy Green Jr. (Lonia), Karl A. Green (deceased), Rodney K. Green Sr. (Charlan), Gary B. Green (Heidi), Florence R. Green, and Tara D. Green-Baldeh (Thomas Baldeh). There are 14 grandchildren, Michael E. Green II, Le-Roy Green III, Kahlil Guinn, Tony Garcia Jr., Rodney K. Green Jr., Robyn Green, Thomas D. Baldeh II, Dickory D. Baldeh (deceased), Mathew J. Baldeh, Kerry Golightly, LaTessa Cole, Latoya Johnson, Patricia A. Green, RaShanda M. Green and Michaela D. Baldeh. He has 40 great grandchildren and five great great-grandchildren. LeRoy also had two brothers, Lester Randall and Ross Randall (deceased) along with two sisters, Marybelle Guy and Delores Perkins; a host of nieces and nephews in the Kansas City and Michigan areas.

Green Sr., worked at Armour Packing House in Kansas City, Kas., for a brief period.

In 1949, he started boxing at the Edgerton Boxing Club. He had 235 amateur fights until he turned pro in 1950. He was managed by Bill Swift and comanaged by Frank Sinatra, while living and boxing in New York. He was the first boxer from Kansas City to fight at Madison Square Garden. In addition to New York, he traveled throughout the world and boxed in weight classes from welterweight to lightheavyweight.

At the age of 23, he was Kansas' lightheavyweight champion. As his boxing career developed, he became a sparring partner to several boxing "GREATS" including: Sugar Ray Robinson, Sonny Liston, Joe Schmolze, Archie Moore, Emil Griffin and Floyd Patterson.

Throughout his boxing career he fought three World Class Champions: Doug Jones, Bob Foster, and Jimmy Ellis. He earned credits as being a "man of a million moves", a "fast smooth boxer and a student at his game". He was also known as a boxer who used short jolting punches with a tough defense, along with a powerful "right" hand. While sparring with the BEST he was quoted, "I try to learn something from the BEST and put it in a style of my own". His professional record was 45 bouts: 20 wins (10KO), 21 losses, and 3 draws.

Green Sr., was a boxing coach for Sumner Recreation Center and JFK Recreation Center. He was the Sports Director of Kansas City, Kas., where he completed his tenure of 30 plus years at Simon B. Bell Recreation Center.

He achieved great notoriety from training thousands of Golden Gloves and National Champions throughout the Kansas City Metropolitan area. He notably trained Ron Marsh, Preacher Durham, Tony Chiaverini, Steve Martin and Lary Martin (Golden Gloves seven time champion). He loved the art of boxing so much that he passed on his craft to his family. He trained and managed three of his sons throughout their amateur and professional careers. LeRoy Green Jr., was a two time Golden Gloves Champion in the novice and open divisions. He also had 113 professional rounds with a 47.62 KO%. Rodney K. Green Sr., was a seven time Golden Gloves Champion with a 187-9 amateur record. He had a professional record of 12-1. Gary B. Green had an amateur record of 2-2. Afterwards, enlisted with The United States Army.. The boxing talent extended to his grandsons as well. LeRoy Green III, was a one time Golden Gloves Novice Champion with a 7-0 amateur record. Rodney K. Green Jr., was a three time Golden Gloves Champion, with a 24-3 amateur record. Robyn A. Green was a one time Golden Gloves Champion, with a 16-2 record. Bell Recreation under the direction of LeRov won many team trophies because he used his boxing skills to help develop and nurture several of his boxers into national champions and professional boxers. This list includes: Ronnell Jones, Wardell Williams, Grantham, Kevin Randy Carver, Mike Tucker, Paul Lewis, Kendall Neal and Maurice Brantley. He also co-trained World Kick-Boxing Champions: Bob Thurman, Steve Macky and top contender Jeff Payne.

many to mention. Green Sr., also received many awards for "coach of the year". He extended his training regimen to total fitness and conditioning to many including Harry Connick Jr. He would have notable boxers make an appearance at his gym including, Riddick Bowe and Leon Spinks.

LeRoy definitely developed a high caliber

series of fighters, too

He was an avid jazz fan. He was a member of the Kansas City Jazz Ambassadors Association. He especially loved listening to live jazz performances.

He leaves to mourn long time and devoted friend, Betty Stacey.

Home Going services were held on Monday, July 28, 2014, at The Cathedral Immaculate Conception.

Interment, Memorial Park cemetery, Kansas City, Kas. Condolences may be shared on our website mrsjwjonesmemorialchapel.com.

Missouri Valley Tennis Pioneers To Be Inducted Into Black Tennis Hall Of Fame

By Tracy Allen CALL Staff Writer

It's hard to ignore the pioneering efforts of Arthur Ashe and Althea Gibson. Same with the continual success of WTA legends, the Williams sisters, Venus and Serena.

But when it comes to blacks and tennis, you don't have to go far to find local legends who made an impact in the profession, on a national and international scale.

Fortunately, Kansas City can take pride in former stars who made an impact during a time when African Americans were still fighting for basic civil rights.

Recently, families of three natives of the Missouri Valley section – two from Kansas City, Kas., learned they will be inducted in to the Black Tennis Hall of Fame later this summer.

The late Mary Etta Fine and the late Eva Belle Bracy of Kansas City, Kas., and the late Richard Hudlin are among the seven members of this year's Black Tennis Hall of Fame's class. Mrs. Fine, Mrs. Bracy and Hudlin are all being honored as pioneers of the game within the black community.

To be selected has pioneers, individuals must have an outstanding record of success on the tennis court or have made exceptional contributions to the sport of tennis during segregation and prior to civil rights legislation in 1964.

The induction ceremony will be held next week, Thursday, Aug. 7, during the American Tennis Association Championships in Ft. Lauderdale, Fla.

The Fine sisters, are natives of Kansas City, Kas., who learned the game of tennis from their older brother, Leo. The sisters won the American Tennis Association (ATA) National Women's Doubles championship in 1955, 1957 and 1958. Mrs. Fine also won the mixed doubles national championship in 1951 with her brother Leo, and the women's singles title in 1958. At the height of her career, Mrs. Fine was Althea Gibson's dear friend and often considered one of her toughest rivels

Both sisters were college graduates and taught school in the Kansas City, Kas., Public schools.

"The thing about the Fine sisters, they were both self taught," said Fred Johnson, diversity inclusion manager for the Missouri Valley Tennis Association section. "They would practice and practice and before long, they be became pretty good players."

"That was a huge impact on them but on the community too because it allowed other African Americans to see two black women play tennis around town. It heighten awareness around town," continued Johnson. "You could say they were a Venus and Serena back in the '50s. Even when you travel in the Missouri Valley circuit today, I hear white people say they remember the (Fine) sisters. They were pretty well respected in that circle in that time."

Johnson got to know the sisters back in the '90s and says he worked hard just to get them inducted into the Missouri Valley section Hall of Fame, of which they both achieved in 2000.

"To me, they were elated to get that, and it was long overdue," said Johnson. "This was pretty big for them, and I told them i do something special for them."

That includes next week's Black Tennis Hall of Fame. "Even though they're not here, they'll get their recognition," added Johnson, who says that the sisters former church, the Fellowship Christian church of Kansas City, Kas., will also celebrate their induction in the upcoming weeks

"The Fine sisters, I didn't know how well respected they were in tennis around here, especially with African Americans but to (receive the induction), that is a big thing. They had a big impact in this area." So much so, says Johnson and others, that the Fine sisters were key in bringing Ashe and Ms. Gibson to Kansas City several times for tennis exhibitions and events during the 1960s and '70s.

Hudlin played tennis at the University of Chicago from 1926 to 1928, serving as team captain of the 1928 team. Hudlin was the first African American to serve as captain of a tennis team at a Big Ten conference school.

In 1945, he filed a lawsuit against the MUNY Tennis Association of St. Louis to open public tennis facilities to all players. Hudlin won his legal challenge, allowing for black tennis players to participate in tournaments in St. Louis.

Hudlin also spent time in St. Louis with Mrs. Gibson and Arthur Ashe, playing at the Armory tennis courts. Hudlin passed away in 1976.

To have three area greats be recognized for their pioneering ventures says a lot about their legacy in Kansas City and the national circuit.

Beside the Kansas City inductees, others who will join the local natives in this year's class include Lendward Simpson, who became the first African American, in 1974, to play World Team tennis, signing with the Detroit Loves. Also, he and Hall of Famer Bonnie Logan won the ATA National Mixed Doubles four consecutive years from 1967-1970; Dr. Hubert A. Eaton Sr., who won the ATA Junior title in 1933 and was CIAA Singles champion in 1936. Former Lightweight Boxing Champ Green Dies

K.C.K. Boxer Once Sparred With Sugar Ray Robinson, Sonny Liston, Floyd Patterson

By Tracy Allen CALL Staff Writer

A former area lightweight boxing champion who once served as a sparing partner with boxing greats Sugar Ray Robinson, Sonny Liston, and Floyd Patterson, has died.

LeRoy Green Sr. died on July 22. The former Kansas City, Kas., native was a two-time

LEROY GREEN SR.

Golden Gloves champion and also a former boxing coach serving at several recreation center in the Kansas City, Kas., community.

Green Sr. began boxing in 1949, at the Edgerton (Kas.) Boxing Club. He had 235 amateur fights until he turned pro in 1950. He was managed by Bill Swift and co-managed by Frank Sinatra, while living and boxing in New York.

Green was the first boxer from the Kansas City area to fight at Madison Square Garden. In addition to New York, he traveled throughout the world and boxed in weight classes from welterweight to light-heavyweight.

At the age of 23, he was Kansas' light-heavy-weight champion. As his boxing career developed, he became a sparring partner to several boxing legends including, Sugar Ray Robinson, Sonny Liston, Joe Schmolze, Archie Moore, Emil Griffin and Floyd Patterson.

Throughout his boxing career he fought three World Class Champions: Doug Jones, Bob Foster, and Jimmy Ellis. He earned credits as being a "man of a million moves", a "fast smooth boxer and a student at his game". He was also known as a boxer who used short jolting punches with a tough defense, along with a powerful "right" hand. While sparring with the BEST he was quoted, "I try to learn something from the BEST and put it in a style of my own". His professional record was 45 bouts: 20 wins (10KO), 21 losses,

Green Sr., was a boxing coach for Sumner Recreation center and JFK Recreation center. He was the Sports Director of Kansas City, Kas., where he completed his tenure of 30 plus years at Simon B. Bell Recreation center.

He achieved great notoriety from training thousands of Golden Gloves and National Champions throughout the Kansas City area. He notably trained Ron Marsh, Preacher Durham, Tony Chiaverini, Steve Martin and Lary Martin (a Golden Gloves seven time champion).

He also trained and managed three of his sons throughout their amateur and professional careers. LeRoy Green Jr., was a two-time Golden Gloves Champion in the novice and open divisions. He also had 113 professional rounds with a 47.62 KOs. Rodney K. Green Sr., was a seven time Golden Gloves Champion with a 187-9 amateur record. He had a professional record of 12-1. Gary B. Green had an amateur record of 2-2.

The late boxing talent extended to his grandsons as well. LeRoy Green III, was a one time Golden Gloves Novice Champion with a 7-0 amateur record. Rodney K. Green Jr., was a three-time Golden Gloves Champion, with a 24-3 amateur record. Robyn A. Green was a one time Golden Gloves Champion, with a 16-2 record.

Bell Recreation center, under the direction of the late Green, won many team trophies because he used his boxing skills to help develop and nurture several of his boxers into national champions and professional boxers. It includes, Ronnell Jones, Wardell Williams, Kevin Grantham, Randy Carver, Mike Tucker, Paul Lewis, Kendall Neal and Maurice Brantley.

Green Sr. also co-trained World Kick-Boxing Champions: Bob Thurman, Steve Macky and top contender Jeff Payne. LeRoy definitely developed a high caliber series of fighters, too many to mention.

Green Sr., a member of the Kansas City Jazz Ambassadors Association, leaves to mourn long time and devoted friend, Betty Stacey. Homegoing services were held on Monday, July 28, at The Cathedral Immaculate Conception. Interment, Memorial Park cemetery.

Sporting Legends Induction To Include Chiefs' Great Hunt

Lamar Hunt, Peter Vermes, Jimmy Conrad To Be Inducted Into Sporting Hall

By Tracy Allen CALL Staff Writer

One was responsible for the creation of Major League Soccer. Another once played for the U.S. National team in the '90 World Cup and helped Kansas City win its first major soccer championship. The other, was a World Cup participant but also, helped lead Kansas City to a MLS Cup appearance.

The late Lamar Hunt, Sporting Kansas City Technical Director Peter Vermes and former Sporting K.C. player Jimmy Conrad are being honored as newest members of Sporting Legends. The three are being inducted tonight, Friday, Aug. 1, into the Hall of Honor during an on-field ceremony at Sporting Park during half-time of Sporting Kansas City's match against the Philadelphia Union.

An initiative launched in 2013, Sporting Legends pays tribute to club icons and provides a platform for inductees to re-engage with the local soccer community. Vermes and Conrad were selected among five finalists via a weighted vote through social media and SportingKC.com.

Sporting Club selected Hunt as an honorary inductee for his pivotal role in founding Major League Soccer, the Kansas City professional soccer organization and pioneering the sport's growth in the United States. The Hunt Sports Group owned the Kansas City Wizards from their inaugural 1996 season until 2006, as well as the Columbus Crew (1996-2013) and Dallas Burn/FC Dallas (2003-present). A 1992 inductee into the National Soccer Hall of Fame, Hunt was awarded their Medal of Honor in 1999. Clark Hunt, Chairman and CEO of the Kansas City Chiefs, will attend Friday's ceremony on his father's behalf.

"My family and I are thrilled that my father Lamar will be inducted into the Sporting Legends hall of honor this weekend," Clark Hunt said. "Although he always shied away from individual accolades, I know that this honor would have been especially meaningful to him, because of his unwavering affection for the sports fans in Kansas City and his unbridled passion for the sport of soccer in the United States. We are very grateful to our partners and friends at Sporting KC for recognizing Lamar."

Vermes, who played for Sporting K.C. when they were the Wizards and were owned by Lamar Hunt and Clark, said, "To be honored as a Sporting Legend is not only a proud moment, but a humbling accolade from the perspective of all the great people that have been involved in shaping this organization," said Vermes, who not only led Sporting K.C. to the 2013 MLS Cup but also, was inducted into the National Soccer Hall of Fame last year. Vermes' Sporting squad currently is first in the MLS Eastern Conference. "I thank all those that voted for me and I appreciate the opportunity to be a part of this organization for as long as I have. I have never and will never take the opportunity to represent Kansas City for granted."

Vermes, Sporting Kansas City's manager since 2009, is the second-longest serving head coach in team history. He has won two major trophies – the 2012 Lamar Hunt U.S. Open Cup and the 2013 MLS Cup championship – as well as two MLS Eastern Conference regular season titles (2011, 2012). He owns a .570 winning percentage as manager, best among any coach in club history.

Vermes, as a player was one of the team's most imposing defenders. He anchored the backline from 2000-2002, starting 78 games and garnering MLS Defender of the Year honors in 2000. Kansas City allowed just 29 goals in 32 regular season games that year with 17 shutouts en route to winning the MLS Cup and MLS Supporters' Shield. He earned 67 caps for the U.S. Men's National Team from 1988-1997 and competed at the 1990 FIFA World Cup in Italy. Vermes, the only person to win the MLS Cup as both a player and a coach with the same team, was inducted into the National Soccer Hall of Fame in 2013.

Conrad made 204 appearances for the club from 2003-2010 and scored 17 goals, the most by a defender in team history. He guided Kansas City to the 2004 Lamar Hunt U.S. Open Cup and an appearance in MLS Cup later that season. The centerback was a six-time MLS All-Star (2004-2009), a four-time MLS Best XI selection (2004-2006, 2008) and the 2005 MLS Defender of the Year. He also captained the club from 2006-2009.

Conrad earned 27 caps for the U.S. Men's National Team, winning the CONCACAF Gold Cup in 2005 and competing at the 2006 FIFA World Cup in Germany. He won MLS Cup in 2001 with the San Jose Earthquakes.

"After plying my trade for eight years in a city that I came to know and love, I am incredibly honored to be recognized as a Sporting Legend," Conrad said. "I want to thank everyone along the way who gave me the confidence to become that caliber of player and I can't emphasize enough how much this induction means to me and my Sporting Park will host the opening four matches in the 2014 CONCACAF Women's Championship on October 15 and 16.

"This tournament provides fans with another opportunity to see some of the best women's soccer players in the world compete on the international level," said U.S. Soccer President Sunil Gulati.

"We look forward to an exciting World Cup qualifying round played in the United States at some of the best stadiums in the world in front of passionate football fans," said CONCACAF President Jeffrey Webb.

The tournament will feature eight countries from North America, Central America and the Caribbean region vying for berths in the 2015 FIFA Women's World Cup next summer. As host of the Women's World Cup, Canada has secured its berth, so the 2014 CONCACAF Women's Championship will include the USA, Mexico, Costa Rica, Guatemala and four teams to be determined at the CFU Women's Caribbean Cup from Aug. 19-26.

All eight countries, including the U.S. Women's National Team, will kick off their qualifying campaigns in Kansas City, Kas., with their first of three group stage matches. Sporting Park will host international doubleheaders on back-to-back nights beginning with Group A on October 15 and followed by Group B on October 16.

The full tournament schedule, including opponents and kickoff times, will be set at the Final Draw on Sept. 5 in Miami. Ticket information will be made available in the near future.

All matches during the 2014 CONCACAF Women's Championship will be televised live across FOX Sports 1, FOX Sports 2 or FOX Soccer Plus.
